The Bernard Warfield House
Woodbine
Private

1812

The Bernard Warfield House faces south on the south east corner of Route 94 and Mullinix Road. It is a five bay wide, one room deep two and a half story high, gabled roof (running east-west) brick bond building, laid on a fieldstone foundation with wide brick chimneys inset into its east and west walls.

The central, rectangular double door is located on the south elevation. It is surmounted by a four light transom and stretcher brick flat arched lintel, flanked by two rectangular, double hung first floor windows, holding nine-over-six lights, decorated with projecting wooden sills and stretcher brick, flat arched lintels. Fenestration is vertically aligned and proportionally scaled with second floor windows on the south facade (laid in flemish bond) holding six-over-six lights. Three gabled roof dormers rest above.

An office-den-kitchen two story high, intersecting gabled roof (running north-south) brick and stucco north wing creates an "L" plan off the west side of the building's north wall.

A one story high, gabled roof (running north-south) brick (laid in English garden wall brick bond) smokehouse stands north of the house, and large barn and auxiliary buildings east and south.

Notable as a Warfield Farm for over a century, it is most significant as the farm of the son of J.D. Warfield, local historian of Howard County, who wrote Founders of Anne Arundel and Howard Counties, Maryland.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Bernard Warfield Farm faces south on the south east corner of Route 94 and The Mullin~~x~~ Road. It is a five bay wide, one room deep, two and a half story, gabled roof (running east - west) brick (laid in flemish bond and English garden wall brick bond) structure laid on a field stone foundation, with wide brick chimneys inset into its east and west walls.

The central, rectangular double door is located on the south elevation. It is surmounted by a four light transom and stretcher brick flat arched lintel, flanked by two rectangular, double-hung first floor windows, holding nine-over-six lights, decorated with projecting wooden sills and stretcher brick, flat arched lintels.

Fenestration is vertically aligned and proportionally scaled. The south elevation is laid in flemish bond and holds five second floor windows similar to those below. The second floor windows hold six-over-six lights and are similarly decorated to the others. Three gabled roof dormer windows rest above. They hold single, rectangular, double-hung windows with six-over-six lights. A plain wooden cornice decorates the roof line on this elevation.

The west elevation of the main body of the house holds a nine-over-nine light first floor window in the north bay, decorated with a stretcher brick flat arched lintel, which is vertically aligned to a nine-over-six light second floor window decorated with a flat header brick lintel. Two square casement, four light, attic windows, decorated with header brick flat lintels rest above.

The east elevation holds a wide batten wood rectangular cellar entrance surmounted by a hand hewn flat wooden lintel. It is flanked by a stone retaining wall, covered by a gabled roof. No first and second floor windows appear on this elevation but two four light attic casement windows rest in the A line formed by the gable roof. They are underlined by projecting wooden sills, flanked by flat pilasters and surmounted by flat wooden lintels.

The north elevation holds two vertically aligned and proportionally scaled first and second floor windows in the two east bays of the north wall. A square cellar window rests in the stone foundation between and below these windows. The interior central entrance hall holds a rectangular north entrance. This has become a door leading into the office-den running along the central and two west bays of the north wall of the main house. This kitchen-den wing forms an "L" plan and is now a three bay wide, one room deep, two story high, intersecting gable roof (running north-south) brick (laid in English garden wall brick bond) first floor and stuccoed second floor structure. A tall square, brick chimney rises from the gable roof between the central and south bays of the west wall. Fenestration for this section of the house is rectangular, double-hung, holding six-over-six lights. This section, too, rests on a field stone foundation. The west wall appears to have been repaired in several places, indicating a possible earlier construction date than the rest of the house. The lintels of the three first floor windows, of which the central one has been blocked in for better interior arrangement, are surmounted by header brick flat lintels. The second floor appears constructed of frame which has been covered with stucco. These windows are underlined by projecting wooden sills, flanked by flat pilasters and surmounted by flat wooden lintels.

The north elevation of this section of the house holds a blocked entrance and west of it a rectangular six-over-six light window. A wide exterior stone foundation centered on this wall may once have been the base for a wide cooking fire place which was later removed. The brick fill in this central section of the wall substantiates such a theory.

What was once a one story high, shed roofed kitchen porch along the east elevation of this section of the house has been enclosed and built on a cinder block foundation. A second floor has been added on the south side beneath which is located the den. The space above is used as a bath, with six-over-six light north window. Below rests a den double window, each component similar to the window above.

Eight cement steps lead to the rectangular kitchen entrance on the east wall. Two four-over-four light first floor windows rest north of the door.

A one story high, squarish, gabled roof (running north-south) brick (laid in English garden wall brick bond) smoke house, laid on a stone foundation, lies north of the house. It holds a central rectangular batten wood door on its east wall, surmounted by a flat wooden lintel.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Bernhard Warfield House, known as The Heritage and once as Locust Grove, stands on a part of Philamon Dorsey Warfield's holdings, known as Bite the Skinner. It is architecturally and historically significant to Howard County and the State of Maryland as a fine example of an early brick five bay wide, one bay deep, central hall, gabled roof domicile and as the home of Philemon Dorsey Warfield, Son of Captain Benjamin Warfield of Cherry Grove, who served as a lieutenant in the War of 1812. On returning from that war he married Lucretia Welsh, daughter of Philip Welsh, one of the early settlers of the Florence area.

Here they raised eleven children, among whom was J. D. Warfield, author of Founders of Anne Arundel and Howard Counties, Maryland, the bible for all interested in historical research in Howard County. In addition he served as head master and English teacher at Brookville Academy and later at the Glenwood Institute before becoming a professor at the University of Maryland, then known as the Maryland Agricultural College. It is presently owned by the great grandson of Philemon and grandson of Professor Warfield, Mr. David Warfield.

Architecturally, it is notable as one of Howard County's few brick federal homes, featuring fine flemish bond brick on its main facade and wide brick chimneys inset into its end walls with a dining room-kitchen intersecting gabled roof wing creating an "L" plan.

An old brick smoke house of this early period stands near the house as well as a large barn and auxiliary buildings.

In the process of being totally renovated, it is one of Howard County's finest landmarks, one of some thirty sites chosen by local historian, Celia Holland in her bicentennial edition of Landmarks of Howard County, Maryland.

Historically and architecturally of outstanding merit, this house and its surrounding outbuildings should be placed on the National Register of Historic Sites.

Re: National Register Form Preparation
Bernard Warfield Farm
Howard County HO-113

In response to your request for further information I am including an Interior Description, Acreage and Justification, Verbal boundry and Sketch Map.

In regard to the title search I found recorded in the Md. Hall of Records in Annapolis the deed recording the sale of the tract of land called "Bite the Skinner", 140 acres and one square perch of land more or less, from Charles Greenberry Ridgely to Benjamin Warfield for the sum of 561 pounds, 15 shillings on June 4, 1802. Recorded in Land Records Volume NH No 11 page 599.

"Captain Benjamin Warfield built his home Cherry Grove in 1768. He was commissioned in 1778 a captain in the Elk Ridge Battalion of Militia. Two sons, Beale and Philomen Dorsey Warfield entered the War of 1812. In the midst of that war, in 1814, Captain Benjamin died, leaving the land purchased from Charles G. Ridgely to his son Philomen."

"In 1815 Philomen D. Warfield married Lucretia Welsh and built his brick house "Locust Grove" near the Ridgely pioneer cottage."

The remains of that log structure still stand most of it having recently been leveled by fire.

The family graveyard lies about 250 feet south of the house It is surrounded by an old iron fence and two rows of cedar trees. It includes the graves of Philomen and Lucretia Warfield and several of their children, including Joshua D. Warfield.

Reference: "Founders of Anne Arundel and Howard Counties" by Joshua D. Warfield .

Considering Joshua D. Warfield was the son of the builder of Locust Grove I think his references should be considered reliable.

Re: Bernard Warfield Farm

Interior Description

First Floor: Central hall, four rooms plus laundry and bath

Second Floor: Four bedrooms and two baths

Third Floor: Two Bedrooms

The main entrance is through double paneled doors beneath a four light transom, and the wide jambs are paneled. This leads to a central hall bounded on the right by a 14 inch thick interior brick wall supported by a field stone foundation.

To the left is an open staircase rising to the third floor. There are eleven steps to the first landing and a returning flight of five steps to the second floor landing. At the first landing there are also three steps leading to the second floor rooms which were added over the rear wing of the house. The staircase continues past the second floor landing for seven steps to a landing and a return flight of seven steps to the third floor. The risers, treads and rectangular balusters are of pine surmounted by an octagonal hand rail of walnut. The turned newel post on the main floor has a 6 $\frac{1}{2}$  inch square base and those above are 4 inch bases. The handrail, main floor newel post and stair treads have remained in a natural finish with all other trim and doors painted.

To the right of the central hall on the main floor is a 16X 20 foot parlor. There are four nine-over-six light windows, two on the front wall and two on the rear wall. Centered on the wall opposite the parlor entry is the fireplace. The pine mantel is supported by flat pilasters with horizontal mouldings above the fireplace opening, which match the window sill mouldings in this room. Window and door trim in the parlor and hall is wider than in the other rooms.

To the left of the hall is a 14 X 20 foot dining room. Centered on the opposite wall is a fireplace with pine mantel. To the right of the fireplace is a nine-over-nine light window and there are two nine-over-six light windows on the front wall. There is a door to the basement stairs next to the rear wall and a door to the kitchen in the rear wall.

All of the floors in the parlor, hall and dining room are four to six inch random width tongue and groove pine and the ceilings nine foot six inches high. The doors are all six panel pine doors.

From the central hall opposite the front entrance there is a door leading to the kitchen. This was at one time an outside back porch entrance but in about 1930 was enclosed to enlarge what is now a 22 X 13 foot kitchen. It has just been remodeled to include six hand hewn beams taken from an older log building on the farm. Beyond the kitchen to the rear is a small den panelled in weathered gray siding, a recently added bay window and fireplace. Adjoining this is a laundry room, a small bathroom and an enclosed stairs leading to the two rooms and bath over the rear wing.

On the second floor in the main wing of the house there are two bedrooms over the parlor and dining rooms. Both rooms have fireplaces with pine mantels and window placement like the rooms beneath them. The windows are six-over-six lights and the ceilings are 8 foot 6 inches, floors are 4 to 6 inch random width pine. A bathroom has been added in the front hall between these two bedrooms; and closets have been added in the bedrooms.

Directly above the second floor front rooms are two finished attic rooms with a dormer window and two casement windows in each. The small hall area between these also has a dormer and 4 to 6 inch pine floors. Bedrooms here are floored in very wide pine and oak boards.
